Today Quantic Dream S.A announced the worldwide release of the Detroit: Become Human™ PC Collectors' Edition, which features a suite of collectibles for fans of the award-winning video game.

Available at an SRP of $349.99 USD, this edition was revealed last May during the studio's inaugural live stream on Twitch and is limited at 2,500 units worldwide. The Collectors' Edition contains a holographic I.D. card from Cyberlife with a unique Steam game code inscribed on the back, a set of three pins representing iconic symbols from the game and an exclusive statue of android and protagonist «Kara».

The 27cm statue (10.6 inches) sits on a base illuminated by an LED ring and features articulated robot arms. Its triangular box (420 x 365 x 375 mm) mimics the android creation scene in the CyberLife factories.

This exclusive Collectors' Edition of Detroit: Become Human™ on PC is available today, October 22nd, on the official online store <https://shop.quanticroam.com/> and at select retail partners.

A critical and financial success, which recently surpassed 5 million units sold worldwide, Detroit: Become Human™ puts the fate of humanity and androids in your hands. In the near future, at a time when machines have become more intelligent than humans, every choice you make will affect the outcome of the story thanks to one of the most elaborate interactive narratives ever written.
